new dimensions

A person stands in the center of a futuristic, dimly lit interior space. The room is filled with glowing blue lines that form a grid pattern on the floor and walls, creating a sense of depth and perspective. Numerous small, rectangular red displays are suspended in the air, some showing text and others showing abstract patterns. The overall atmosphere is high-tech and immersive, with a focus on light and space.

"It has a sculptural character"

The band's back together: Barber Osgerby and Flos have collaborated again. The result is a continuation of Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby's Belthop collection in the form of a super-sleek, nearly 6-foot floor lamp. The duo took the domed blown-glass diffuser of the line's existing table lamp and inverted it to create an LED up-light; then attached it to an aluminum pipe stem—painted Green, Chocolate Brown, White, or Brick Red—and finished it off with a round concrete base and a foot-dimmer switch.
